AFTER an existence of barely over a year the first Japanese Parliament has been dissolved, and next month the country will be in the throes of a general election. It was perhaps hardly to be expected that the first Parliament should be one of long duration. Representative government being entirely new to the country and parties being in an imperfect stage of organisation and constant. ly undergoing kaleidoscopic changes, the keeping a working majority was inevitable.

With respect to some of the matters mentioned, however, the opposition offered has been estensibly directed not so much to the in respect to the purchase of private railways, the Opposition brought in a Bill of its own to effect that purpose.
